SECOND LOVE.

For a wave of soft hair on her temple,
For an echo that lives in her tone,
For a gleam of memorial color
In eyes that look love to my own;
For a something that fades while I watch it
Half-fashioned of doubt and half clear,
For nothing my phrases may picture,
She is dear to my life, she is dear!

And yet do I wrong not the spirit
That gives from its costliest store
With tender devotion, receiving
Calm gratitude's guerdon— no more,
Not alone for the vague, fleeting likeness
To a face of the past without peer,
But for that which is hers and hers only,
She is dear to my life, she is dear!

I have told her my desolate story,
And felt, while I told it, there stole
Compassionate sorrow to waken
The depths of her beautiful soul.
I knew she could pity; I knew not
Her power to strengthen and cheer,
Pure bringer of Heavenly wisdom,
She is dear to my life, she is dear;

Having learned how my heart's warmer fervor,
Was wasted in tears ere we met,
She seeks but to comfort its loneness
And brighten its gloom of regret;
She asks no reward of sweet service,
Unfaltering year after year.
Divinest of saintly consolers,
She is dear to my life, she is dear!

Select Miscellany.

My Mother-in-Law and I.

"So you're to marry John Wheeler, are you Chat, and move right into the house with the old folks?" said my Uncle Peter, as he came in suddenly one morning, long ago, and found me buried in the pretty mysteries of lawns and laces, and bows of ribbons, and the glow on my cheeks red as the heart of the sweet rose in the wreath on my white silk bonnet.

"Yes, I suppose so," I said, bending over a heap of dainty ruffling to hide my embarrassment.

"Well, child, I give you joy of your new mother-in-law," said he, peeping round to see what my busy hands were doing, "and, Chatty, if you haven't a hard life before you no one ever did have. I pity you—that's so; my heart aches for you, little niece; and I believe if that old termagant does not treat you like a human being, I'll slip round into the grove back of the cottage with my shot gun, hunting quails, and I'll make a mistake and shoot her! ha! ha!" and that jolly old Uncle Peter leaned back in his chair, and laughed merrily.

"You know, Uncle Peter, it is an old saying that a mother-in-law and a daughter-in-law are natural enemies.' Now do you really believe there is a mother-in-law in the world whose heart can not be found—that she can be touched tenderly, lovingly, if one could only find the right key?"

"Well, I don't know, sis. I am afraid Granny Wheeler is an exception. When I lived on the Downing farm, adjoining Wheeler's, I did think I never saw her equal; she thought no one knew anything but herself. My wife could not get along with her, and you know Sobe's way is kind and gentle, and forbearing. I felt sometimes as though it would be a real satisfaction to me to make mouths at her and go 'yeh! yeh!' She used to make me feel very spiteful and devilish, as though I would enjoy calling her names. Oh, she has an eye like a Norway rat—so sharp, and bright, and cunning!"

"Why, that's energy, Uncle Peter," said I, beginning to feel that I must stand up for John's mother.

"Fiddlesticks!" said he, shutting his tobacco box with a click, and slipping it into his pocket, and rising to leave

"Well, uncle," said I, "as Mrs. John Wheeler, Jr., we'll be good friends, won't we? And you'll come and see Chatty, and she'll visit you; and if she should make any discoveries she'll tell you.

"Yes," he replied, sighing; "and if you find out really that old Granny Wheeler has a drop of human blood in her veins, let me be advised of it."

Forewarned is forearmed. Do you think, reader, there was a cloud no bigger than a dove's wing even in my beautiful summer's sky? I thought one little minute, seriously, my hands outspread midway in the air between my heap of foamy laces and my forehead; and something made me say, with a brave smile whose twinkle I found in my eyes, "it will be just as I—just as I will it!"

Then those grand old words came surging up to me full of hope, strength, an anthem of exultation.

The wedding was a quiet affair: we were married by the gray-haired old pastor, who had dandled me on his knee in babyhood, and whose raven locks I had pulled to my heart's content, into whose pockets I had searched to find something good for little girls. Of all the ministers I had known he alone was the one to officiate on this important occasion.

We moved into the same house with John's parents, I tried to take the place of a daughter. Of course I did not find everything as I would like to have it; but I made allowance for the manner in which he had been brought up. Mother treated me kindly enough, but as though I had no judgment and could hardly be trusted alone with anything that required care or thought. It seemed that she regarded me as a child, to be looked after and made comfortable. Sometimes if I felt ready to cry out, I would say, "For his dear sake," and dry up my tears, and make myself happy. Little trials like the thorns on the thistle, met me every day, but I had shod my feet in anticipation. I tried not to draw any comparisons between my two homes, but they would come up to me.

One of the adornments with which Mother Wheeler beautified the wall of her rooms, was a cat and two kittens cut out of black cloth, and pinned on a white back ground. I grew very tired of the round headed cats, and cautiously suggested their removal, but her, "Oh, no, I like to see them!" silenced me.

Over the mirror in the sitting room, were long sprays of asparagus drooped, that in the twilight looked like the faint mist, while the finest gilt and bronze tail feathers of slaughtered chickens intermingled with the delicate green.—Her side-saddle, with the crimson plush seat, and bright brass fixtures, always hung in the best bedroom, and in the night its dim outline would look like the horned head of a buffalo. It was not for me, John's young wife, Chatty, that its time-honored place should be vacated, and that it could hang in a closet or in the attic, out of sight.

All this shocked my ideas of taste, but gratified and pleased my mother, who had been accustomed to these regulations all her life. John wanted to break in upon her rules, but I could not endure the idea of the innovation—of setting aside her good old way, and taking as it were, her work from her hands, just as if she had outlived her usefulness. It would have been cruel and thoughtless, and would have given her a fatal wound. She had seen a great deal of trouble, having brought up a large family, who were married and living in houses of their own.

Death had taken from her two lovely babes, who were just beginning to prattle; and one son, a young man, had met an awful death by being dragged more than a mile over a new road with his foot in the stirrup. Her husband had been security for a neighbor in the first years of her wedded life, and had the debt to pay. Half of the sum she had paid, with butter and cheese, and dried fruit and berries, that she had gathered with her nursing baby lying in the shade near her.

Often while toiling thus, the dishonest rascal whose debts she was sacrificing herself to pay, would dash past her, clean and soft-handed, and stately and proud in his glittering carriage.

O, could I, an interloper, come into her home and mark out new lines and new duties, and crowd against the wall this crowned old heroine? God helping me, I said in my heart, I will be a daughter unto you.

I could see that my music was something new that she did not like—that her lip would curl a little when she would touch my magazines and books of poetry; so most heartily did I sing sweet old church music, and when I placed the books on the table, I would lay Pilgrim's Progress, or a volume of sermons, good, old, well-read books, on mine, as though intimating a preference. It was a little thing, but mother understood it, and her eyes would follow me with a questioning look, as much as to say, "I wonder if you love me, Charity?" She always called me Charity, sounding the R very distintly.

She wore old fashioned lace caps, with a full border of frill all around the face.—All the pride had seemed to centre in her faultlessly neat, but old-time caps. Her hair was abundant, and quite brown and pretty but it was always covered and out of sight.

My friends, when they would visit me, would say, "If I were you, I'd soon have those great, scary-looking, boozy caps in the stove, they are so abominably old-fashioned."

My thoughts would fly with electrical speed away back to the time when that poor old mother was young and vigorous, and bravely bearing the trials and sorrows that had fallen to her lot when her heart was wrung with anguish over the death-beds of the beloved children, and the dark graves closed over their dead faces, taken suddenly away from her bosom, and oh! she would be so dear to me, and I would be so ready and willing to defend her, that her very faults almost seemed virtues.

I liked to show mother off to advantage and sometime, when my visitors would be dressing and re-dressing their scant adornment of hair, and resorting to deceptive means to make much hair out of little I would say, "Now sit down and rest, mother, and let me comb and brush you."

Then I would unroll and loosen her wealth of brown hair, all down her back and shoulders, and its waves, and ripples, and glossiness, would bring forth the most envious and enthusiastic exclamations of delight and wonder from the admiring visitors.

One morning early a neighbor came in very angry, saying that our horse had been in his cornfield all night, and if the like ever happened again, he would shoot every one of them. His anger was contagious, and mother retorted, "Fix your old fences then.

The old man said something in the same spirit, and she replied in a like manner, and the little fire of anger was blazing up into a flame. I had not caught the infection at all; and coming into the kitchen at that moment I said, "Heigho, good neighbors, this will never do! Poor mother is not well this morning, and she flashes up like powder. You have reason to be provoked at our horses, but I know you will never have cause again; and now don't let a little thing like this make you angry with us; you're too good a neighbor to lose so easily—worth more than all the horses in town. Don't mind poor mother's hasty words; you know if you were sick or your wife or babies, she'd be as much troubled as though it was in our own family, and come puffing over, with her herbs and roots and poultices, and—"

"Oh, I know it, Chatty, and know I have been a little too fast; that's so. I should have waited until I was calm, but I came right here from the field, as fast and as mad as I could come. You mustn't mind me, Mrs. Wheeler," said the man, with eyes that wanted to cry, as he stood there so ashamed and embarrassed that he had turned his hat inside out half a dozen times, and twisted the rim into all sorts of shapes.

"Why, bless you, Nathan, I'm not a bit mad," said mother, reaching out her hand, "but you took me by surprise, I just said the first thing I thought of. I take fire just like dry tow; but I couldn't hold spite at ye, if ye shot every critter on the farm."

Just then the man came in from hunting the horses, and made apologies, and said he should be well paid for damages etc.; but Nathan went off blushing and saying he wouldn't take a cent of pay; he was ashamed of himself, and that his wife had his breakfast waiting for him, and away he ran with his hat crammed down on his head with the cotton lining on the outside.

This little incident showed that mother was a kind-hearted, reasonable woman, and I began to think my uncle Whitaker was himself to blame if he did not find her a good neighbor.

I often had hard work to keep myself under proper restraint.

One day my mind had been dwelling upon my school days, and I felt in a mood for writing. In the afternoon I dressed up freshly, in my newest white dress, and went away up stairs where I could be undisturbed. I had written two verses, and was deeply in the enjoyment of the coming poem, "The Meadow Path," when I heard a great commotion, and squalling among the geese, and going down stairs the noise was apparent.

Mother met me at the gate in such an outlandish attire that I did not know her. She wore a dingy old flannel dress, her neck bundled up with a cotton shawl and a handkerchief tied around her head, so as to cover her ears and hair.

She said the geese were all at home now and she was afraid of rain, and thought we had better pick them that afternoon. I couldn't write verse only when the poetical mood was upon me, and I didn't know when that would be again, and I was so sorely disappointed I cried.

She saw my red eyes, and divining the reason, said, "O, you'll have to drop a good many of your fine-lady ways if you make a farmer's wife."

So I dressed up after the fashion of women who pick geese, and worried through as long an afternoon as I ever lived. My head ached, and my poor arms were bitten all over with blue spots, and I was so tired and low-spirited that I could hardly keep from crying, right before John.

Some time in the night I was awakened by a low moaning sound coming from mother's room. I threw a shawl over my shoulders and softly drew near her bed, when I heard her suppressed cries of pain, I said, "Are you sick, mother?"

"Is that you, Chatty?" she replied, with a sense of relief in her tones, "don't let me disturb you—you are tired and need your sleep. Oh, my body and limbs are cramped and cold, but maybe I'll get warm pretty soon, and feel better. Go to your bed, and don't let me disturb you."

I laid my hand on her forehead, and it was cold and clammy, and big drops of sweat stood upon it. I soon heated water and made teas, and soon had her wrapped in warm flannel, and before half an hour she was comfortable. As she became easy she closed her eyes and was sinking into a restful slumber, when I touched her lips in blessings upon her forehead.

"Oh, Chatty, child of mine," she said, crying right out, "I have never been half good enough to you. I should not have taken you from your writing to-day; you little tender thing, what a pity you fell into such cruel hands!"

I slid my arm around her neck, and gathering her to my bosom, cried over the dear old broken-down mother—the woman of many sorrows, stricken when in full leaf and blossom with a blight that would have been death to any other less brave, and noble, and true.

I crept into the bed beside her; and just as she was sinking into a sweet and painless sleep, her tremulous voice said, "Chatty, don't never tell it, but it is the truth; never did one of my daughters come to me in answer to my moans of distress when I was sick at night. What was it? Didn't they love me as much as you do?"

I soothed her by saying I had always been the little nurse and doctor at home, and my ear was open to catch every sound of pain. It calmed her and she rested until morning.

Little things like this drew us together, and we soon become warmly attached to each other. Oh, we had pleasant times together—my mother-in-law and I.

When wee baby Charley came to me the little pink and white flower, his grand-mother opened her arms to him as though he was a great blessing sent from Heaven. He touched her heart and filled it with joys she never knew before. The fountains of my own soul were opened, and life assumed new realities and new beauties; and a sweet song of gladness broke from my lips and flooded my soul.

Crowned with motherhood, I walked with feet anointed, and the glory of the stars seemed to gather about my brow.

From the time that mother was attacked with sickness in the night, she seemed to fail and grow more and more lovely as she gradually faded from earth, She would sit for hours and play with the baby, and laugh at his funny little ways, and think that he looked just like her babies, who had lain under the sod for twenty years.

It is very pleasant to die thus—like a light growing dimmer, and dimmer, like the sunset tint fading from the hill-tops, into the soft twilight—creeping into the darkness gradually.

The last summer we lived together we had not much work to do, and I look back now to that May and June and October as I would remember a song or a book read by the seaside, or something that gave me sweet pleasure and left beautiful memories.

After she was confined to her bed, she would lie and watch me, and follow my footsteps with a tender, loving gaze—eyes full of light, of love; and often she would say to me, "Oh, Chatty, you are my best child! I know I have been stern and cold, but you have always been the same dutiful daughter. You have overlooked my faults, and you have kept back the unkind reply many a time when I was unjust to you. You have helped to make me a better woman than I was, and for all this, you know, I bless and love you."

Oh, how much better it was for me now that I yielded my will and my wishes to her's in the first year of my married life, and treated her respectfully, too, in the appointments of her own household. What was the praise or blame of my butterfly friends now, in comparison to the good will and earnest love of husband's mother.

Before mother died I was her nurse for seven weeks; she would have no other. I gave her medicine, attended to her wants, taking rest as best I could. I could not have endured it much longer; I was worn and pale, and thin, and felt all the time as if I were dreaming.

One morning I sat in the rocking-chair beside her; John held the baby as he sat on the other side of the bed. Her hand was in mine—her little blue-veined, wasted hand, on which was a beautiful ring, the gift of a brother who had died far away from his home.

She said in a low voice, looking fondly upon me, "Chatty, you are tired; but you will not have mother to care for to-night. I wish you would take off this ring and put it on your own hand, and wear it for my sake. Whenever you look at it, remember what I have often told you lately—how dear you are to me, how much I love you."

Before noon of that day the stranger silence of death came stealing over her face. I knew what it meant. We had so grown together that it was like rending life from me to part with her, and with a cry I fell back fainting. Dying, as she was, she heard the fall, and turned her head to look; and died with her last, long gaze fixed—oh, so tenderly!—upon me.

And this is my testimony—the record of one mother-in-law; and I tell it, believeing it may do good, and perhaps be a light and a lamp to the feet of those who may have and hold in their hearts the desire to do unto others as they would have others do unto them.

A YANKEE TRICK.—One of our peculiar, slab sided, gaunt Yankees lately emigrated and settled down in the West. He was the picture of a mean man, and as he put himself to work in good earnest to get his house to rights, the neighbors willing lent him a hand. After he had got everything fixed to his notion, a thought struck him that he had no chickens, and he was powerfully fond of raw eggs. He was too honest to steal them, and too mean to buy them. At last a thought struck him—he could borrow. He went to a neighbor and thus accosted him:

"Wall, I reckon you hain't got no old hen nor nothin' you'd lend me for a few weeks, have you, neighbor?"

"I'll lend one with pleasure," replied the gentleman, picking out the very finest in the coop.

The Yankee took the hen home, and then went to another neighbor and borrowed a dozen eggs. He then set the hen, and in due course of time she hatched out a dozen chickens.

The Yankee was again puzzled; he could return the hen, but how was he to return the eggs? Another idea—and who ever saw a live Yankee without one—he would keep the hen until she laid a dozen eggs.

This he did and then returned the hen and eggs to their respective owners, remarking as he did so:

"Wall, I reckon I've got as fine a dozen of chickens as you ever had your eyes on, and they didn't cost me a cent nuther."

BARGAINS! BARGAINS!!

The Bellefonte "Republican" and the "American Agriculturist."

We are now prepared to offer to the people of Centre county, a Great Bargain for the coming year. It is this: To every subscriber who will send us $3.00, in advance, we will send the

BELLEFONTE "REPUBLICAN,"

and the

"AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST,"

for one year. Of the REPUBLICAN we need not speak at present.

The American Agriculturist is a work that no farmer, nor house keeper should be without. As a farm-journal we think it has no superior in the world—certainly none in the United States. It is issued monthly, and the subscription price is $1.50 per annum. By clubing with the REPUBLICAN you save fifty cents, and secure more good reading matter than you can obtain in any other way for the same money.

We hope the reading public will avail themselves of this very liberal offer.

MONEY! MONEY!!

Reader, what do you think of this type? It is pretty, is it not? Now if you have paid your subscription to the REPUBLICAN you need not read any further. What follows is not intended for you. But to those who have not paid, we have a word to say. We want MONEY! MONEY!! Who will be the first to respond? We urge upon all delinquent subscribers, the necessity of sending in the price of subscription as speedily as possible. We need our money or we would not dun you for it. Put yourselves to a little trouble, friends if need be, and pay up without delay. Our terms, remember, are cash in advance. And if we are kind enough to trust you awhile you should not make the time too long. Let us hear from you one and all.

Specie Payments.

We learn by telegraph and, by several of our exchanges, that Merchants in several of our large cities have commenced paying out change in silver to their customers. While this may be only a sharp advertising dodge of the Merchants, it, nevertheless, aids the cause of large capitalists who have been urging a return to specie payments, and who have been making it their business to discount good commercial paper at 20 per cent., and from the present surface appearance their wishes may be realized, but the result might be the reverse of what they in their wisdom anticipated. In stead of making money scarce, as they expected, it may inflate the currency beyond their control by putting in circulation two hundred million of specie which is now hoarded up, and thereby increase the circulating medium of the country to nine hundred million of dollars, which would make one hundred and fifty million more of an inflation than was voted down in the Senate, the other day. We say that the speedy resumption of specie payments may result in that way. But suppose the holders of the specie of the country should refuse to loosen their grasp on the precious metals, and the business of the country in the meantime should be transacted on a gold basis, how long would it be before specie in the market would go so high as to be out of reach of the large mass of the business men of the country, resulting in a panic in business and a crashing of business interests the like of which has never been witnessed in this country, and which can be better imagined than described, all to the enhancement of the pecuniary interest of gold holders and gold speculators.

No, gentlemen, the experiment is too dangerous to try just now. Give the country a circulating medium in quantity to the wants of our increasing business population, equal in quality to our present circulation, and there will be no business panics and demoralization of the business interests of the country, and in a few years the natural commercial law will bring about specie circulation of its own accord.

DEATH OF A MONSTROSITY.—The Free Press states that Helen Eckert, well known as the fat girl of Easton, died at the residence of her father near South Easton. She was eighteen years of age and had been confined to the house for the past two or three years. In early life she was on exhibition, and traveled under charge of Col. Wood, now proprietor of Wood's Museum in Chicago. She was for a time engaged with Barnum in New York. At the time of her death, she weighed 500 pounds.

An Havana correspondent writes that the Cubans have begun to retaliate in kind on the Spaniards. General Quesada, before he was superceded by General Jordan, ordered all the prisoners within his immediate command to be shot, and 135 Spaniards were quickly sent to their last home. When Jordan took command he shot 300 prisoners. The black flag is flying on both sides now, and a war of extermination has been begun.

Recollections of 1861-2—Wars First Alarm in Bellefonte.

DEAR REPUBLICAN:

I say recollections, because anything I shall write in this or any subsequent letters under this head must needs be recollections, for I have not a memorandum of any kind. I shall endeavor to recollect only such things as really occurred. No one will question that enough occurred in those early years of war to make almost any man's recollections interesting—if one could recollect the occurrences. I only recur to the occurrences as they occur to my recollections.

Bellefonters doubtless all remember the exciting times in Bellefonte in the spring of 1861, when first the "dogs of war let loose were howling." We had been accustomed to the howling of all sorts of dogs, save these dogs of war. Prince, Blanche and Towser might howl and yelp the live-long day, and we went about our business, regardless, They might make night hideous and we would snore away. We ever sang of old Dog Tray who was reputed to have been a very faithful kind of "purp," and whose tail, according to the boys rendering of the song, was severed in the rear. But when these grim "dogs of war" set up their howl, we lost sight of business and the almighty dollar for the moment, and the snore of the sleeper was suddenly hushed. The people became excited and common dogs dropped their tails and ran away.

When "Freedom's bugle call"—you've heard of this bugle on spread eagle occasions on the 4th of July, before the war, when the notes of this bugle were heard among the "mountain fastnesses—whatever they are—of old Centre; when those notes echoed from Allegheny's peaks to those of Nittany, and from Nittany to Tussey and back again; they set our hair on end like a galvanic shock, and set our teeth on edge like a pickle. Prior to this time the only bugle-call we had heard was the blasts of the old-time dinner horn of Penns and Nittany valley's—a litteral "horn of plenty." It is worthy of remark, that old Centre's stalwart sons were ever marvellously prompt to answer this call. A thousand graves, now green, on Southern plains, tell how promptly they answered to this new bugle call, first heard in '61. Thousands of crutches, empty sleeves, tell the same sad story—sad but glorious.

It is April—April 1861. Fort Sumpter has fallen! after hours of heroic resistance, after guns were disabled, the barracks on fire, every cracker gone—our heroes surrendered the fort—not themselves, not the flag. They salute their banner with an hundred guns, and march out with its folds waving over them; march out to the music of the Union—"Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle." The wires trembled with the news, and we trembled with the wires. The calamity which we had hoped to avert was upon us—WAR.

I remember well the little groups gathered here and there in the public square, talking—talking gently, earnestly. Men on "Tonner's corner" whittled, and the toys they fashioned were guns and swords. Men penciled on those old store boxes, and the pictures they drew were of banners and drums.

Then came the call for troops, and who has forgotten the meeting for the enlistment of the "Fencibles," that company, every member of which according to the N. Y. Tribune, was worth $25,000 or more; that company of drilled men—men who had "marched" and "countermarched," "shouldered," and presented," and "camped out" on Jimmy Ward's hill, and hence knew all of war. Those men who had been twitted by wives and sweethearts, and citizens about what they would do when war came, never dreaming it would come so soon. And what did they do? They went.

Wasn't that old Court House full? Aye, and hearts were full, and pockets were full. Hearts said we'll go, and pockets said we'll care for your families. And we went, some of us, and some of us determined we'd stay, we'd stand our ground and never flinch until—until the enemy came. We'd remain right in that town until the rebels came in at our front doors, and then we would go out at the back door. We'd wait till we could count the buttons on their coats, and then we'd count them, and—and—run. If they came via Pleasant Gap we would go out by way of Milesburg.

Why there were a million people in Bellefonte the day the Fencibles started for the three months term. That is, there would have been a million people there if Centre county had had that many inhabitants, for they were all there, I think. The people came and brought the children. There was roll-calling, and marching, and speech-making, and hand-shaking, and crying. Why some people cried till they wilted, and no marvel, for their husbands, and sons, and sweethearts were going to the war—going for three months!

A last good bye and they are gone. Pleasant Gap is reached safely, and, throwing out skirmishers, they advance cautiously into the mountains. If any rebels were concealed among the rocks they remained so, and the passage of the Gap was safely effected—being no rebels marshalled on Pennsvalley's plains, they march with firm and steady step toward the "Seven Mountains. George Foust's signal station reports the road clear, and Lewistown is reached, and from there to Harrisburg by rail, and thence to the front.

What anxiety concerning the absent ones. If a private letter came, it was read and circulated. When a "returned soldier" made his appearance after an absence of ten days, he received a warm welcome. I don't remember the names of any who died among the Fencibles, save little George Burkert. Some of us went away down to Rebersburg to his funeral. He was buried "with the honors of war." For want of a six-pounder, an anvil was fired. For want of muskets, ancient horse pistols were shouldered. Poor George; he was as much a martyr as though he fell at Gettysburg.

The return of the Fencibles at the end of the three months term, was a perfect ovation, equalled, perhaps, by the review of the army at Washington, at the close of the war. We walked and drove out miles to meet them, and there was 'joy in the house of Ward.'

During their absence, and about the time of their return, other companies were formed and marched away, so many that I lost the run of them. But I remember Capt. Snyder's company, and Capt. Curtin's company, and I think Capt. Blair's company. Any I have not mentioned. I have forgotten.

During all that eventful summer, war meetings were the order of the day. Raising men and money was the chief occupation of the people. How nobly did Centre county aid her own patriotic Governor in placing Pennsylvania at the head of the great struggle for freedom and the maintenance of the Union. More anon.

Truly Yours,
EM QUAD.

CHICAGO, Mar. 8, 1870.

For the Republican.

HOME, March 2d, 1870.

MR. EDS:—The great man who represents this County in the Legislature at Harrisburg was at home on the 19th of February. He brought with him a friend from Harrisburg. When he and his friend arrived at Woodward, on their road home, they did not stop to take dinner with Mr. Miller—the gentlemanly proprietor of the Hotel at that place; but stoped with J. C. Motz, a Republican. This of course was not done so much to conciliate Mr. Motz, because he is a Republican, as to save the Bill at Mr. Miller's Hotel.

When Mr. Meyer, and his Harrisburg friend had ended their visit, they took the stage, at Aaronsburg for Millintown, on the 28th ult. The passengers take dinner at Woodward; but Mr. Meyer and his friend did not stop with Mr. Miller—the Landlord, this time. They went to a Republican Store and sat there until dinner was over.

Mr. Miller is a Democrat and feeling a little ashamed of the conduct of his Representative went to Jacob G. Meyer, and invited him to come over to the house and take dinner with him; but Mr. Meyer declined saying that he and his friend had eaten a piece.

Mr. George Miller, then told him that he was a nice man to send to the Legislature. He told him that a man who would spunge his way from Harrisburg home and back again, was too stingy and mean to represent the Noble people of Centre Co. And the meanest of all. Mr. Miller said was his spunging it off Republicans. They had a big time. Mr. Miller says he never can have his vote again, and if he had it to do over again, he would vote for Mr. Coburn, as he (Coburn) would show himself like a man.

Mr. Meyer, told me he was doing a good thing at Harrisburg. He said he had sold one hundred barrels of flour. What does he care about the people? The first inquiry he made when he came home was, "is my mill wagon still running to Aaronsburg?" Is it possible that the Democrats sent Mr. Meyer to Harrisburg to sell flour? Who would not be a Democrat?

A DISGUSTED DEMOCRAT.

AYER'S American Almanac, for the new year, has arrived for delivery gratis by Mr. Frank P. Wilson, to all who call for it. This little annual has the largest circulation of any book in the world, made by the fact that it furnishes the best medical advice which is available to the people—enables them to determine what their complaints are and how to cure them. It contains the startling announcement of the conflagration of a world—the combustion of one of the stars in the firmament with all its attendant planets.

At Baltimore, Md., on the 7th inst., Senator Revels of Mississippi lectured at the Bethel Church, to an audience of four or five hundred persons, one fourth of whom were white. The lecture was chiefly on the improvements and welfare of the colored race, and was replete with practical, sound advice and admonition. He earnestly enjoined education and economy, and at the close of his address said the colored people must be true to the country, to themselves and to the Republican party. The Senator was frequently applauded.

THE Cincinnati Times says that the aggregate production of all the pineries of Wisconsin and Minnesota during the year 1869 is estimated at 812,400,000 feet of lumber and logs. The pineries along one river alone in Wisconsin the Chippewa on which there are thirty-three mills, employing a total capital of $10 000,000, turned out 108,000,000 feet of lumber besides 15,000,000 of logs sent to market.

THE GALLOWS.

Execution of Gotlieb Bohner and Albert Van Bodenberg. The Murderers of the Peighta Family.—Desperate Attempt to Escape.—Scenes, Incidents, &c., &c., &c.

The closing act in the Bloody drama inaugurated on the evening of the 17th of November last, by which three innocent and unsuspecting victims, John Peighta, his wife, and a little boy named Scott Garner, while partaking of their evening meal, in the seclusion of their peaceful abode, in Penn township, were so suddenly and unceremoniously hurried into eternity, was consummated at 1 o'clock to day by the infliction of the extreme penalty of the law upon the unfortunate and guilty participants.

The sickening details of the fiendish deed, the flight and arrest of the murderers, their arraignment for the three-fold crime of robbery, arson and murder, their trial, conviction, and sentence, have already been published in full in the Journal & American, and are yet fresh in the recollection of our readers. We do not now propose to dwell upon them, but simply to give a brief account of the attending circumstances which have already enlisted so much of public interest.

PETITION OF BODENBERG.

Charley, the time is now getting very short for us to live. Then we will have to appear before the Judgement Seat of God. We will there receive our reward for the deeds done in the body, be they good or evil. You have so often promised and sworn to me that you would bring about my release. I therefore now, once more pray you in the name of God, to tell the truth. If you cannot or will not save my life, at least save your own poor soul from everlasting damnation.

There is still some time. You have no right to say that a man dies like a beast, or that when a man dies, all is over. I know only too well that something still remains in your heart, which tells you unmistakable enough that which you say to be directly contrary to the truth. Your perverted mind does not admit it. Your sins are too frightful to allow you power to tell the truth. Neither can you humble yourself before the throne of our Lord Jesus Christ. I can assure you that you will soon regret it. So far as I am concerned, you can do whatever you choose, but pray tell me what pleasure can this be to you, that I be praying with you? I have fortunately not depended much on you, for I think I know you. You have no feeling for your fellow man. It is true, I believed very confidently that the Court would not condemn me to die, since I went with you with the sole purpose of stealing this money; nor have I taken the life of any man; in full consciousness of which also I can die. If you reflect upon this affair, how terrible you battered this woman's head with the shovel; how beseechingly she begged you to spare her life you will perceive who will accuse you when we shall appear before the tribunal of God. I cannot consider it just that you should be believing more than myself since I told the truth from the first day we came here, which appears not to have been considered before the Court. All this I did not know in time, or else I would have told all my self at the time I was asked whether I had anything to say. I had the confidence that those who had the law in hand, to whom I told these things, would cause these things to operate in the proceedings, but this did not happen according as it appeared to me afterwards. When a man cannot confide in those who are in authority, what can I do who am a prisoner. I cannot speak English; do not know the laws of this country, and have no friend who could do anything in my favor; neither have I money where with to make friends. I could do nothing more for myself than what I did; namely, to tell the truth, which, as I said before, could not condemn me to death, for, in Germany the law is such that whosoever does not take the life of and man, cannot be condemned to death. This also I take for justice. There is therefore no more left than the confidence which I have in our Father which is in Heaven. It will also, by this time, have appeared who the real murderer is; however, the word guilty has been pronounced upon me who will have to be executed. I receive the answer from every one that comes, that it is now too late.—(To save one unjustly condemned, is this Justice! This I leave in the hands of Him who rules over us; who established the powers that be. Upon the conscience of those who wield this authority, may this responsibility rest. I will not, nor is it my province to pronounce judgment upon any man. I commit it all into the hands of the Lord our God, is the Great Judge. He says "vengeance is mine I will repay." In Him I place my trust. In Him I live and die It is true only the few profess His name: so it falls to my lot like as unto Him. Every one cried away with him! So it is now. No one takes mercy on me excepting one, our God.

It is indeed a matter of no small amount to me to take leave of the world in the best years of my life, and it may well be a matter of regret for all such as could have been any assistance to me. Many who think of me after my death will see my spirit flit before their eyes. It is true I did what I should not have done in this, that I shared the money, because I knew nothing of the murder, yet this cannot condemn me to death. Men may think of me what they please; I know that I took the life of no man, and Almighty God is my witness.

I now return my sincere thanks to each one who showed me a kindness during the time of my imprisonment, and every one. Farewell.

ALBERT BODENBERG.

ANOTHER CONFESSION.

Bohner was then observed to be busily engaged in writing, and about 9 o'clock at night, committed into the hands of Deputy Sheriff Fouse, the following paper which purported to be his last and only confession and entitled.

AN OPEN CONFESSION TO GOD AND THE PEOPLE.

On the 15th of November, 1869 we went on the railroad to Huntingdon, where we got off and went to the place where the deed was done. Bodenberg said that the farmer had gold and silver, and then I believed what he had said to Mrs. Gable in Altoona before I knew him, that "he was to get gold and silver from Germany." (This lady was here as a witness in court, and her story was believed) I found out last spring, when I was in the same boarding house with him, that the farmer had gold and silver. He said to me that he wanted to steal it all from him. He worked as a cabinet-maker in the round house in Altoona and made for himself a large knife for that purpose. We went to the place to steal the first time one month before, but could not do anything, and went away again to Altoona. I went to work again, and he went to a man that had a daughter, and spent his time with her. He had no money and no work. This knife that he had he threw into the canal at Huntingdon when he were there the first time.—He made this girl great promises of much money, which brought him to the thought of murder. We came to the farm and slept on Tuesday night in the house. My pistol I laid out on the window according to his orders and he said that he would get up in the night but we were very tired and slept till daylight. We staid in the neighborhood that day, and he told me how he would make it; that he wanted my pistol and his, one in each hand and would demand the money. We both went into the house where they were eating supper, and I held the door shut so they could not slip out. He spoke in English what he wanted and the farmer and his wife spoke English to him, which I did not understand, because I could not do it myself He demanded the money because I could not speak English, only a little. After quarreling awhile the wife got up and the man also, and he shot the farmer with the pistol in the right hand, and the woman with the one in left. The man fell to the floor, but the woman did not fall. She picked up the coal shovel and came towards me where I was still standing at the door, and struck at me, and fell at the same time to the floor. Bodenberg again loaded his pistols, and shot the little boy dead. He shot twice at him so far as I know. He then loaded again, and shot the farmer once more and gave me the empty pistol which was my own; in the meantime I hit the farmer's wife with the coal shovel as she still was not dead yet.

We then went into the bedroom and broke open the bureau and chest with an axe, and found gold and silver and $250 in paper money, and divided it equally. The amount of gold and silver I do not know. We divided it, but did not count it. I put mine in a bag, and stuck it in a pair of pants which was lying on the bed, and wrapped it in a black cloth. He also took a cloth and overcoat, and boots, and then went out into the horse stable where he wanted to get on a horse which I did not agree. We then came to a quarrel, and he threatened to shoot me, and pulled out his pistol, and I pulled out mine which was not loaded, but still in the same condition he gave it to me. I was loaded it and told him let us go. He says not yet; we will burn the house down so that the people will think they were burned. We took a bundle of straw, and I went in and laid it in the room, put bedclothes to it, and he put the fire to it while I was watching at the window. After this we went away towards the railroad, and said on the road that he wanted to visit a good friend a few days, and wanted to present him the pistol, and asked whether I would not give him mine. I told him if he would give me $4, what it cost. I would, and he gave me the $4 in silver. I did not trust him right, and shot it off first, and asked him to shoot off his too—We came by this to Huntingdon, and staid here till the train arrived going towards Altoona. What became of these pistols I cannot say. He never told me. I run it now that I went along, but it is too late. Then I had no reason for it. He here in the jail took up his religion again, and took this ground before the world to make himself free, but it did not save him from death. I was steadfast in my belief, and cannot change like him. I believe in God an eternity, and do not like when others want to tell me out of the church. A great many believe that I never went to school. If I were a bad man I could still turn and be a good man, (so could every man) however, each one can think as he pleases of me. I have given myself to God, and expect His mercy after I have ended my trouble. Neither of us is innocent of the death penalty. This is the correct and the whole truth. This I speak before God, when I come to the foot stool of mercy and throw myself upon Him who is my stand by, and this is the reason I am ready to leave this world. I wish all well when I leave, after I have lived 40 years.

Yours truly.
GOTLIEB VAN BOHNER.

A few sentences in conclusion, expressive of thanks to Deputy Sheriff Fouse to whom this revelation was made, and his family, for kindness shown him during his imprisonment, are omitted by request.

Bohner, some time during the forenoon committed to writing, and gave into the hands of Mr. Steehel, the following statement, entitled,

FINAL STATEMENT OF BOHNER

"LAST WILL OF ONE ABOUT TO DIE."

Beloved in the Lord:—It is a matter of labor to collect my thoughts, to say unto you my farewell. I pray all whom I may have offended not to treasure up any anger against me, but to pardon me since I am about to recall, and do now recall, all, before I depart. I depart from this life in the consciousness that I am at peace with God. I therefore take this cup of bitterness with comfort. I place myself immediately before the judgment seat of God as I approach the shores of eternity, since I constantly pray and commune with Him silently. This causes me comfort and happiness here and hereafter. I speak in this manner to God, and not to man. I feel myself offended in this when man undertake to teach me. I have in Germany myself led in prayer meeting and know too well that a man can by himself be converted. I have myself experienced the righteousness of God since I have walked the broadway, and left the narrow way which leads hunts life. Whether men will pardon me I do not know, yet I hope that God will have mercy on me at the last day of Judgement. Beloved citizens of Huntingdon, by the time you will have seen my last writing and my last words, I will likely not be anymore, for the messenger of death stands at the door with his flaming sword, and demands my soul. Whether I am guilty, or not guilty, I am not able to judge, therefore I leave it in the hands of God. He is the righteous judge. His powerful word I will soon hear, and will submit myself to His righteous punishment. Beloved friends: that I may so call you, causes me a peculiar pleasure. I cannot, by word or mouth tell you. You may therefore receive it from my pen, for the pain which I suffer prevent me from telling you; for I take nothing out of this world but the empty pages, whereon I make known my tears and complaints. My tears flow while I am writing. My last tears rests on this page. Think of me here as I will think of you in yonder happy world! I have no fears of the grave. I rather long for it, because I shall find rest from pain and troubles suffered and endured.

Beloved, all in Huntingdon, I say once more to you and my farewell; with the hope however to see each other in regions beyond, where pain and tears and troubles shall be no more; where God will wipe away all tears from our eyes; where we shall all bloom in everlasting spring. I will beseech God in your behalf, and will consecrate to you my last sigh. During my last thoughts for you, death will translate me into the better life. My hand trembles. Tears become my eyes. To certify to the truth of this, I seal it with my death and attest it with my own signature.

Very Respectfully,
GOTLEIB VON BOHNER

The intended wife of Bodenberg, a young girl named Kerper, from near Altoona, visited him in the evening, and was witnessed as the parties took a final leave of each other. She also conversed with Bohner and implored him to tell the truth and save Bodenberg. Bohner merely replied to her, in substance that they had lived together as boarders at Altoona, and they would have to die together.

AN AFFECTING SCENE

THE SCAFFOLD

erected near the centre of the jail yard, is a plain wooden structure, 15 feet high to the platform, and 21 feet to the cross beam, from which the two ropes dangled with the noose of each adjusted and in readiness for the final scene. The platform and trap door are made in the same simple manner, and all the arrangements including the

TWO PLAIN COFFINS

intended for the condemned culprits, were completed and in readiness. The scaffold and surroundings were vested by hundreds of people yesterday, and

THIS MORNING,

the last on earth for the doomed men, we visited them about 8½ o'clock. In answer to our inquiry, as to how he felt, Bodenberg said "not good," and said he had passed a restless night, and had not slept any. He was weeping bitterly. Bohner, was lying on his couch reading his bible, but shortly afterward, arose, and engaged in conversations with the visitors answering promptly all questions put to him. His conversation was as usual, scattered and wandering from one subject to another, without any seeming realization of his situation. At 9 o'clock the room was cleared of all visitors and the prisoners were left alone with their spiritual advisors outside was immense, and every available position, from which a glimpse of the scaffold could be obtained was occupied, including trees, roofs, chimneys, &c. A number of enterprising individuals had erected scaffolds outside the jail walls, from which several hundreds of people were accommodated with a sight. In short no device was left untried by which the morbid curiosity of the curious could be gratified, and the hill in the rear of the jail yard was at one time literally packed for acres on acres with human beings to the number of perhaps three or four thousand, presenting a perfect sea of upturned faces, anxiously awaiting a glimpse of the scene were about four hundred people, including the Sheriff's assistants, the jury, and the representatives of the press, a large number of whom were in attendance.

THE CROWD,

INSIDE THE WALLS

The irons were removed from the prisoners, neither of whom manifested much emotion during their removal, Bodenburg merely ejaculating, "Bless God, I'm free!" and the doomed men were brought from their cells for the last time, and conducted to the scaffold. Bohner, in charge of Deputy Sheriff Fouse, headed the procession, and was followed by his fellow culprit in charge of Capt. H. Clay Weaver, and these in turn followed by the Revs Steckel, Clarke, Wilson and other attending clergymen, to the scaffold. The prisoners were assisted in mounting the ladder, but manifested little trepidation, and ascended with little difficulty.

AT 12½ O'CLOCK PRECISELY

A PRAYER IN GERMAN

was then offered by Rev. Sykes, of Martinsburg, Blair county, after which Bodenberg proceeded to read in German the paper referred to, and already published, to which Bohner listened with the most profound attention, and in answer, remarked that they were both guilty, and both ought to die together, or words to that effect. Bodenberg responded in a very earnest and excited manner, "Shame on you Charley. You ought to be ashamed of yourself to talk so in your last moments. Such conduct does not seem human."

THE CONCLUDING PRAYER.

was then offered by Rev. J. C. Clarke, and was a most fervent and eloquent petition to a throne of Mercy in behalf of the unfortunate and condemned culprits.

THEIR LAST WORDS.

On being asked if they had anything further to say, Bohner merely re-asserted as truth the confession made by him last evening.

THE FAREWELL.

The attending clergymen then each in turn took an affectionate leave of the culprits, and retired from the scaffold. The ropes were then adjusted by the Sheriff and his Deputies, and while in the act of so doing Bodenberg ejaculated fervently his

LAST PRAYER

as follows: "Oh Lord Jesus Christ! I am now coming to Thee, forgive my sins, and take my poor soul up into Heaven. Amen' Amen."

The response was taken up and reiterated with the greatest fervency by the ministers, as they left the scaffold.

THE FATAL CAPS.

were drawn over their faces, the Deputies retired, and the prisoners were left alone with the Sheriff, both of whom shook hands with him, and expressed their thanks for his kindness, requesting him to remember them to his wife, Bodenberg saying that he hoped to meet him in Heaven. The sentences were yet trembling on their lips when and the bodies of the murderers were dangling between the heavens and the earth. The drop fell at precisely 20 minutes of 1 o'clock. The bodies remained suspended 25 minutes, at the end of which time they were lowered down and placed in the coffins at the foot of the gallows. Both died easily, without any apparent struggle, there was not on the part of either the slightest motion of the lower limbs. Bohner's neck was broken, whilst Bodenberg died from strangulation.

THE DROP FELL,

The countenances of the men

were almost as natural as ever, with the exception of a slight discoloration in the face of Bodenberg. Thus died the guilty perpetrators of one of the most inhuman murders in the annals of crime, an awful example of the truth contained in the declarations that, "the way of the transgressor is hard," and that "the wages of sin is death." May it be long ere we are compelled to witness or to chronicle another such scene.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Dr. R. W. Carr, of Baltimore, says:

I take pleasure in recommending your Rosadalis as a very powerful alterative. I have seen it used in two cases with happy results—one in a case of secondary syphilis in which the patient pronounced himself cured after having taken five bottles of your medicine. The other is a case of scrofula of long standing, which is rapidly improving under its use, and the indications are that the patient will soon recover. I have carefully examined the formula by which your Rosadalis is made, and find it an excellent compound of alterative ingredients.

Dr. Sparks, of Nicholasville, Ky., says he has used Rosadalis in cases of Scrofula and Secondary Syphilis with satisfactory results as a cleanser of the Blood I know no better remedy.

Samuel G. McFadden, Murfreesboro', Tenn., says:

I have used seven bottles of Rosadalis, and am entirely cured of Rheumatism; send me four bottles, as I wish it for my brother, who has scrofulous sore eyes.

Benjamin Bechtel, of Lima, Ohio, writes, I have suffered for twenty years with an inveterate eruption over my whole body; a short time since I purchased a bottle of Rosadalis and it effected a perfect cure.

MESSRS. W. W. BROWN & A. B. HUTCHISON:—

We the male members of the M. E. Church, at Howard, believe that the Rev S. J. Dorsey, has been grossly misrepresented through the columns of your paper, and in justice to Mr. Dorsey, we wish to state through your columns, that Mr. Dorsy was invited to preach the first time in our church by our pastor Rev T. F. McClure, and afterward by the members. In his addresses he did not use the profane language that was imputed to him. Nor did we hear anything in his discourses contrary to truth or christian morality. Neither did he disturb the peace of three fourths of the citizens of Howard.

MRS. DUNHAM'S CONCERT.—The entertainment given by MRS. M. S. DUNHAM and her Pupils in Reynolds' large and beautiful Hall on last Saturday evening was one of the very best Concerts ever witnessed in this place. As we predicted in our last issue, the House was an overflowing one, every available seat being occupied and many having to stand during the entire performance, which lasted from half past seven o'clock to half past ten o'clock p. m. The grave and the gay, the intellectual and illiterate, the rich and poor were there, and all went away pleased, and vied with each other in rendering praise of the entertainment and the lady who originated it.

As all engaged in the concert performed their several parts so well it would be impossible for us to discriminate between them.

Miss Emma Wagner never appeared to a better advantage or sang more sweetly than on this occasion. Miss Kate Fury had a rich musical voice and sang beautifully, and the sweet voices of Miss Adda Bolinger, Miss Esther Graham, Miss Becky McGinly, Miss Anna McClellen, Miss Gerty Butts, Miss Katy Green, the Misses Weavers, Miss Bayard and all the others who participated in the proceedings showed a development of rare musical talent that none but a master hand could have brought out.

The instrumental Duett by Mrs. Dunham and Miss Sally McAllester was a gem and well executed. "Fra Diavolo" as performed on the Piano by Mrs. Dunham ranks her as one of the very best Pianists and Musicians in the country.

Messers Harris, Blanchard, Hibler and Montgomery, never sang better.—Masters Gahagan, Weaver, Graham, Mullen and Dunham kept the house in a roar of laughter. Fred Smith with his Violin, and Frank Green, with his Violincello, contributed greatly to the enjoyment of the occasion.

We hope Mrs Dunham, will consent to give this community another just such an entertainment.

For the Republican.

The Commissioners, Treasurer and Auditors of Centre County.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

The County Financiers, Custodeans and Auditors have published their annual statement of the Receipts and Expenditures of Centre County, instead of pursuing the plain directions of the law, which declares that such "statements shall enumerate the respective sums paid by each Ward and Township, within the City and County," &c., "and the sum paid individuals for lands over which roads may have been laid out, together with such other items, as may have a tendency to convey general information of the transaction of the preceding year." They have given us a FINANCIAL ENIGMA, in true juggler style, "now you see it. Now you don't." Let the tax-payers of the County examine this statement, and they will find it shrouded in mystical peculation, and impudently calculating on the ignorance of the people, that it is none of their business how their taxes are distributed or scattered. Look at the published receipts and expenditures of Huntingdon and Clearfield, particularly the latter, full, explicit, intelligent and can be understood by all that can read, and the law that directed the publication, so intended. But it appears that our Centre county money guardians of the peoples taxes, exercised their honest ingenuity to involve their annual statement in complicated obscurity, and they have succeeded. Let us look at this Ring exhibit by referring to a few items in their statement. We find the account with Centre county, the Treasurer is debtor:

To amount county taxes outstanding for 1868 and previous years...		$ 34.031 50
To amount of assesments for 1869....		33.553 12
		$67 584 62
And then credited with
Balance outstanding for 1868 and previous years...	$ 9.734 91
Outstanding for '69..	27 410 07
Exonerations to collectors..........	359 77	—$37.504 75
		$30.079 87

This credit is given on the principle of the fellow that got the drink from the landlord, and on promise took the glass, told the landlord to give him credit for that, that he would be back and drink out the balance

In the next place they state that the balance

Outstanding for 1868 and previous years is..........	$ 9.734 91
For 1869	27.410 07
	$37.144 98

Is this not important information for the taxpayers? Why did they not give us the Townships, Boroughs and Towns that are indebted in the sum of $37.-144 98? Why not as well publish the names of these defaulting collectors? Why cover over the names of those collectors, and why have not the Commissioners and Treasurer made these defaulting collectors pay up, as it was their imperative duty without mental reservation, a sum if their "recapitulation" is true, is sufficient to pay off the indebtedness of the county? Instead of this we find in the statement that they have been paying over $1099 of interest on money that they must have borrowed and have issued notes in 1869 to the amount of $28,000 00 with interest. Why not collect the outstanding taxes and pay the debt? We find some other items in these county expenditures that needs explanation. It is stated that the

District Attorney received	$ 559 00
Commonwealth costs paid..........	818 18
Sheriff Commonwealth costs..........	179 40
	$2,556 58

Exclusive of the Clerks of Sessions, which is covered up in the $415 45 which he received. Did the Auditors examine these bills of costs and ascertain that which the county was legally liable to pay them by the fining of the Grand or Travers Jurors? The amount is enormous for one year, and needs probing, and the Commissioners should have published the name of each case and amount of costs in each case for the information of the tax payers, as was their duty. Is there not a hole in the money bag here for favorites? Here is another item that needs light thrown on it:

McAfferty & McDermott, on account of improvement in rear of Court House, and balance on county prison $5,000

"Monsier Panson come again." We thought last year we were done with the indebtedness of the county prison. But why not let us know what was paid for the improvements back of the Court House, by itself and what was the balance due on the county prison, and was it legally paid? The taxpayers would like to be informed on all these matters. But we find one part of this statement intelligible and that is that the Commissioners, Auditors, Clerks and Attorneys have been very diligent in paying themselves, and favorites. But have not compelled the defaulting collectors for years—men of their own choice to pay over the taxes, and if they had performed their duty, from their own showing the county would have been out of debt, taxes levied and the payment of interest saved. More anon on this subject. But if the taxpayers cannot have justice done, let them apply to the Legislature and have a Bill passed for this county to secure a Commissioner and Auditor of the opposite party at all times on the different boards, like in the election of Inspectors of elections and Jury Commissioners, and endeavor to prevent "cheatery about the Board."

A Tax-payer of Harris

A CARD.—Feeling under many obligations to those friends who so kindly assisted at my late concert, I wish them, one and all, to accept my sincere thanks. Also, the newspapers of the county, which contributed so much to my success. The Milesburg String Band for their sweet and beautiful music, the Bellefonte Brass Band, and the public for their kind appreciation, have placed me under renewed obligations.

MRS M. S. DUNHAM.

WEST UNION, Iowa, Feb. 27th, 1870.

AFFECTIONATELY dedicated to cousin Mattie Valentine, on hearing the sad news of the death of her little darling's, Evan and Jennie:

WAITING.

Thou hast two little angels waiting for thee
On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea;
Not impatiently wait your darling's there,
For smiles light up their brow's so fair;
And their little harp's spring out so clear
So soothingly sweet, to faiths listening ear,
And they live in the smile of the Saviour's love,
Who so early called thy darling's above.

Thou hast two little angels waiting for thee,
On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea;
Forever free from sorrow and pain,
Spotless and pure from all earth stains;
Never in error's paths to me—
Safe in the bosom of infinite love,
Evermore, evermore, walking in light,
Those beautiful angels robed in white.

Thou hast two little angels waiting for thee
On the beautiful bank's of the silver sea;
When thy weary heart is throbing with pain,
And you fain would clasp your darling's again.
Oh look away from this earthly strand,
To the beautiful field's of the "better land,"
And think of the angels waiting there,
And offer to God a thankful prayer.

Thou hast two little angels to welcome thee,
When thou too shall stand by the crystal sea;
When the Great Refiner His image may trace,
In the heart He has won by his saving grace,
And in robes of Crists own righteousness drest,
Thy soul shall seek the home of the blest
On the beautiful banks of the crystal sea.
Thy darling's still waiting shall welcome thee.

MARIE.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—

I noticed in reading your interesting paper that many of the churches have been enjoying gracious revivals. Allow me through your columns to inform your many readers how the good work prospered in the United Brethren church of your interesting town, a meeting was commenced on the 8th of January and continued until the 24 of March, during which time some thirty or more were converted. Many were heads of families some of them having past the meridian of life came in at the eleventh hour. During a part of the time our Pastor Rev. J. M. Smith was absent attending conference and his many other ministerial duties, yet the meeting progressed in interest and power and many can look back to that time and exclaim—

"O sacred hour, O hallowed spot where love divine first found me.
Wherever falls my distant lot, my heart
shall linger round thee;
And when from earth I rise, to soar up to my home in heaven,
Down will I cast my eyes once more, where
I was first forgiven."

The conference made Bellefonte a station under the Pastoral care of Rev James M. Smith.

Died.

MACKEY—In Central City, on Saturday, the 12th inst., Carrie, daughter of M. H. and Sallie Mackey, in the seventh year of her age.

[From the Harrisburg Patriot.]

LARAMER—On the —ult., at Pleasant Gap, Centre Co. Pa. Mrs. Mary Laramer, at an advanced age.

The loss of a mother, under any circumstances, always carries more sorrow with it than the death of a father, a brother or a sister, because around a mother ever cluster our fondest affections and noblest hopes.—The loss of a good mother has a doubly poignant sorrow in it, and elicits responsive tears of regret from all the eyes which were wont to view the loving object mourned in death. Mrs. Larame, belonged, as it were, to a distinctive class of American mothers, the influence of whose strong good sense and never-tiring affections has stamped the age in which we live with much of its grand characteristics. Left a widow at an early age, with the charge of a large young family she neither fell beneath the overwhelming weight of her responsibility, nor yielded in performing the severe task imposed upon her. She met all her duties with a calm and resolute spirit living to see her labors realize their rewards in children who not only paid her back in full for all she had done for them but some of them to shed distinction on her name by their well earned honors in life. The domestic history of the country does not contain the record of a nobler motherly struggle in the cause of a family, than that made by the mother whose death we now record. She had no hopes that were not centered in her sons and daughters, though her heart nor her doors were never shut to the hungry or the homeless. She always gave with a free and a loving heart and was known far and wide for the bounty with which her board was spread to those who entered her hospitable home. She was large minded as well as generous hearted. Her counsel was ever for the right and her example in purity's work a light which shed a glorious glow into every heart which rendered her loving respect. Cornelia was not more devoted to the Graci than was she of whom we write to her children, and her descendants did honor to her teachings, alike in their learned professions and on the field of battle defending their country's cause. While gracious hospitality and high Christian charity have a votary the name of Mrs. Mary Laramer will always be lovingly respected in the home of her struggles, triumphs and death.

NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.
THE GREAT FARMERS' PAPER!
The Paper of the People.
NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE GREAT FAMILY NEWSPAPER.
It is Cheap Because its Circulation is Larger Than That of any Other Newspaper.
NOW IS THE TIME TO FORM CLUBS.

The New-York Weekly Tribune contains all the important Editorials published in the Daily Tribune, except those of merely local interest; also Literary and Scientific Intelligence; Reviews of the most interesting and important New Books; letters from our large corps of Correspondents; latest news received by Telegraph from all parts of the world; a summary of all important intelligence in this city and elsewhere: a Synopsis of the Proceedings of Congress and State Legislature when in session; Foreign News received by every steamer: Exclusive Reports of the Proceedings of the Farmers' Club of the American Institute; Talks about Fruit; Stock, Financial, Cattle, Dry Goods, and General Market Reports.

The Full Reports of the American Institute Farmers' Club, and the various Agricultural Reports, in each number, are richly worth a year's subcription.

HORTICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

To keep pace with the growing interest in practical Horticulture and to comply with frequent appeals from all parts of the country for information of a practical character on the subject, we have engaged the services of a person who is experienced in rural affairs to write in a lucid style a series of articles on the Management of Small Farms, Fruit and Vegetable Culture, and how to make them pay, giving general and specific directions from planting to the ultimate disposal of the crops.

Of late years there has been a lucrative business carried on by unprincipled men, in selling worthless and old plants under new names to the inexperienced. The Tribune will be always ready to guard the farmer against any such imposition from that comes within our knowledge.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT.

To make The Tribune still more valuable to its agricultural readers, we have engaged Prof. James Law, Veterinary Surgeon in Cornell University, to answer questions concerning diseases of Cattle, Horses, Sheep, and other domestic animals, and to prescribe remedies. Answers and prescriptions will be given only through the columns of the Tribune. We are sure that this new feature in the Tribune will add largely to its readers as all owners of animals are liable to need the information proffered. Inquiries should be made as brief as possible that the questions, answers, and prescriptions may be published together. In short, we intend that the Tribune shall keep in the advance in all that concerns the Agricultural, Manufacturing, Mining, and other interests of the country; and that for variety and completeness, it shall remain altogether the most valuable, interesting, and instructive Newspaper published in the world.

It has been well observed that a careful reading and study of the Farmers' Club Reports in the Tribune alone will save a farmer hundreds of dollars in his crop. In addition to these reports, we shall continue to print the best things written on the subject of agriculture by American and foreign writers, and shall increase these features from year to year. As it is, no prudent farmer can do without it. As a lesson to his workmen alone, every farmer should place the Weekly Tribune, upon his table every Saturday evening.

The Tribune is the best and cheapest paper in the country. This is not said in a spirit of boastfulness. It has fallen to New-York to create the gratest newspapers of the country. Here concentrate the commerce, the Manufactures, the mineral resources, the agricultural wealth of the Republic. Here all the news gathers, and the patronage is so large that journalists can afford to print it. This in the strength of the Tribune. We print the cheapest, and best edited weekly newspaper in the country. We have all the advantages around us. We have great Daily and Semi-Weekly editions. All the elaborate and intricate machinery of our establishment—perhap the most making the Weekly Tribune the best and cheapest newspaper in the world. The result is that we have so systematized and expanded our resources that every copy of the Weekly Tribune contains as much matter as a duodecimo volume. Think of it! For two dollars, the subscriber to the Tribune for one year buys as much reading matter as though he filled a shelf of his library with fifty volumes, containing the greatest works in the language. The force of cheapness can no further go.

The Weekly Tribune is the paper of the people. Here the eager student may learn the last lessons of science. Here scholar may read reviews of the best books. Here may be found correspondence from all parts of the world, the observations of sincere and gifted men, who serve the Tribune in almost every country.

The Tribune is strong by reason of its enormous circulation and great cheapness. It has long been concealed that the Weekly Tribune has the largest circulation of any newspaper in the country. For years we have printed twice as many papers, perhaps, as all of the other weekly editions of the city dailies combined. This is why we are enabled to do our work, so thoroughly and cheaply. The larger our circulation, the better paper we can make.

What are the practical suggestions? Many. Let every subscriber renew his subscription, and urge his neighbors to do the same. If a man cannot afford to pay two dollars, let him raise a club, by inducing his neighbors to subscribe, and we shall send him a copy gratis for his trouble. No newspaper so large and complete as the Weekly Tribune was ever before offered at so low a price. Even when our currency was at par with gold, no such paper but the Tribune was offered at that price; and the Tribune then cost us far less than it now does. We have solved the problem of making the best and cheapest newspaper in America.

TERMS OF THE WEEKLY TRIBUNE
To Mail Subscribers:

THE NEW-YORK SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE

is published every Tuesday and Friday, and being printed twice a week, we can, of course, print all that appears in our weekly edition, including everything on the subject of Agriculture, and can add much interesting and valuable matter, for which there is not sufficient room in the Weekly Tribune. The Semi Weekly Tribune also gives, in the course of a year, three or four of the BEST AND LATEST POPULAR NOVELS, by living authors. The cost of these alone, if bought in book form, would be from six to eight dollars. Nowhere else can so much current intelligence and permanent literary matter be had at so cheap a rate as in the Semi-Weekly Tribune.

COMPLETION OF THE PACIFIC RAILROAD.
GREAT RUSH TO STERNBERG'S.
Sung to the Tune of Yankee Doodle.

The Great Pacific Railroad's laid,
From ocean unto ocean,
And now couple connection's made,—
An enterprising notion.

The mighty work at last is done,
So speedily and brisk, oh!
And now in ten days we can run
From here to San Francisco.

No more we take the ancient route,
The stage, a horrid slow thing;
It banged the passengers about,
And wore out all their clothing.

CHORUS, for the end of each verse:

The Great Pacific Railroad's laid,
From ocean unto ocean,
And we buy clothes from A. STERNBERG,
A most delightful notion.

Through passengers by the Pacific Railroad will call at the store of A. Sternberg before starting, and provide themselves with a complete outfit of the elegant and substantial Spring and Summer Clothing, the very best assortment of which will always be found at A. Sternberg's Store.

People who travel by other routes, and also people who, instead of traveling by any route at all, prefer to stay at home, can find the most superior and reasonable garments, for every occasion, of every variety, and at the lowest prices.

Do not fail to call and examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere; if you do not, we are sure you will be sorry that you did not. Our goods are put down to the lowest figure. We sell whole suits, according to quality,
RANGING FROM $6.50 TO $18.00
—the very best.

Medicinal Properties of the Onion.

In a medicinal point of view, the onion is of more importance than any other of our domestic vegetables. It is a powerful diuretic, and is said, as such, to have been successfully used as a specific in dropsy, gout, gravel, lumbago, and generally in all affections of the kidneys and urinary organs.—As an instance of its efficacy in dropsy we shall relate a circumstance which came within our observation a few years since. We were traveling through one of the middle departments of France, in company with a very eminent counsellor, and member of the Parisian bar, who had turned his attention to discovering the medicinal properties of simples, in illustration of a favorite theory of his, that all the ailments which afflict mankind may be removed by remedies from the vegetable kingdom, to the utter exclusion of all mineral substances.

One day we stopped and claimed the privileges of hospitality at a distant relative of our friend. We were most kindly received by the lord of the mansion, a fine looking middle aged man who, with tears in his eyes informed us that his lady, whom our friend described as a most gentle, kind-hearted, and noble minded dame was dying of dropsy, all the medical men in the neighborhood having stated that nothing more could be done for her. "That remains to be seen," said our friend hastily. "I must see her forthwith," and he proceeded to her bed-chamber dragging us with him—a circumstance which will create no surprise in these acquainted with the manners of the French. The lady was alarmingly ill and had swollen to an enormous size; she had been tapped once before, but on the present occasion had absolutely refused that mode of relief.

The Parisian lawyer, nothing daunted, called for some white onions.—Having peeled a sufficient quantity he filled with them a pepkin or coarse earthen mug, holding about three pints. Having put in as many onions as the vessel would contain, he filled this with cold water, covered it and set it in the midst of the warm embers where the water would simmer with very little ebullition. He let the onions stew until they were reduced to a pap, and the water to half its original quantity a process which required three or four hours, as the vessel was kept closely covered and the fire slow. He strained the liquor through a linen bag, carefully expressing every drop of juice from the pulp. Having extracted the liquor, he carefully weighed it, and then, gently over the fire, but without boiling, dissolved in it its own weight of coarse brown sugar.

Of this syrup he gave his patient two table-spoonfuls every two hours, a fresh quantity being made, so as to keep up a constant supply. In a day or two the lady felt better, and in about six weeks, during which time we remained at the chateau as guests she was able to walk with us about the grounds. We had occasion to visit our kind host about six months after our former visit, and found his lady enjoying excellent health, and valuing her cousin's onion-syrup as a specific for all the complaints "that flesh is heir to."—Cor. English Magazine.

About Buying Land.

Mr. Greely concludes his third article on farming as follows: "When I was last in Illinois, I rode for some hours beside a gray-coated farmer of some 60 years, who told me this: "I came here thirty years ago, and took up, at $1,25 per acre, a good tract of land, mainly in timber. I am now selling off the timber at $100 per acre, reserving the land." That seems to me a good operation—not so quick as a corner in the stock market, but far safer. And, while I would advise no man to incur debt, I say most earnestly to all who have means, 'Look out the place where you would prefer to live and die, take time to suit yourself thoroughly; choose it with reference to your means, your calling, your expectations, and if you can pay for it, buy it. Do not imagine that land is cheap in the West or the South only; it is to be found cheap in every State by those able to own and who know how to use it."

It may be a matter of interest to some of our readers to state that girdled fruit trees can be saved; and we see no good reason why the same treatment will not have the same effect upon all trees. The experiment has been tried with satisfactory results. The method is as follows: To graft five or six scions, as large around as a pipe stem, and long enough to reach over the girdled place into the tree. First notch the live bark above and below the girdle, then spring the shoots or scions into these notches and fasten the ends with wax. The principle is that the scions grow rapidly and spread over the girdled surface. We have been told by a gentlemen who gave this method a trial that he saved some very fine fruit trees in this way, after they had been appearently ruined by the gnawing of mice.—Exchange.

An arrangement by which the nails of a horse's hoof could be clinched without using a hammer would evidently be an advantage.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEWING MACHINE.
THE SINGER SEWING MACHINE

Among sewing machines, those made by the Singer Manufacturing Company, rank with the highest. Their manufacturing machines, have long been known as the best for manufacturing purposes. But within the past few years, they have given special attention to the production of a FAMILY MACHINE,
destined to win much favor in the HOUSEHOLD.
The machine which they now offer is quite light-running, simple, fast, noiseless. Its accessories for
HEMMING, BRAIDING, BINDING,
QUILTING, TUCKING, CORDING
FELLING, GATHERING, are simple and easily understood. Its delicate though enduring and tireless muscles of iron and steel, do all the work noiselessly, better, and few will deny, "Faster than hand can do it." Then urge those wishing to purchase a machine, to examine all the other manufactures before buying, as it will, for itself, overcome all the objections to the other machines that can be brought against it. Machines on hand for sale and exhibition, together with a full and complete assortment of
SILK, TWIST, LINEN, OR COTTON THREAD both of superior for the machines, by
